Market Commentary

As we moved into the final months of the year, markets began to provide investors with a more positive footing for 2024 as inflation figures started moving lower, towards central bank targets. This provided the markets with some optimism that 2024 may bring interest rate cuts to many economies, which led to assets rallying and providing investors with positive returns.

Moving into the new year, we believe the backdrop for equities will improve but risks will not fully dissipate. We continue to be selective in where we invest on a geographic, size and style basis. Active selection is key as new opportunities will arise with changing markets. We are favouring funds that are focusing on quality businesses with manageable debt levels, high barriers to entry and solid growth opportunities which should outperform over time.

For the first time in several years, fixed income is providing investors with both the opportunity for positive capital return and positive real yields that are above inflation. Due to the reduction in inflation over the past few quarters, central banks are now pricing in future interest rate cuts which should provide a better backdrop for fixed income, especially for longer duration assets.

Within alternatives, we believe the assets that should provide the best opportunities will have low correlation to equities & bonds and their own sources of alpha. We continue to utilise infrastructure, gold and defined returns assets within our portfolios for these reasons.

Due to the positive changes to the macroeconomic backdrop, the opportunity for investors across asset classes is far more positive than has been the case over the past few years.
